

ON THE RISE PROFILES

The Bridgette Mayer Gallery is located in the heart of Philadelphia's Washington Square at 709 Walnut Street. The gallery specializes in unique contemporary paintings and works on paper by emerging and established artists. Yearly solo exhibitions of the represented gallery artists feature works from abstract and landscape to figurative. Owner and director Bridgette Mayer founded the gallery in May of 2001 with ten years experience in gallery and arts management in New York, San Francisco, Taiwan and Philadelphia. The gallery's mission is to support emerging artists and to give their work and careers a critical voice within the art community. The gallery specializes in working with first-time art buyers as well as seasoned collectors interested in enhancing their art collection through the acquisition of market-proven artists.

Born from the realization that many employees spend significant portions of their day fatigued and unproductive, MetroNaps installs mid-day napping facilities into corporate offices and operates retail resting centers. Founded in 2003 and researched and tested at Carnegie Mellon University, MetroNaps has developed a process and facilities to help maximize the rejuvenating effects of a brief rest. The MetroNaps Service and the MetroNaps EnergyPod provide our customers with the quick recharge needed so they can do more with their day, both professionally and personally. MetroNaps opened its first retail location in the Empire State Building in New York City in May 2004. The Company plans expansion through additional store locations and corporate EnergyPod installations. MetroNaps currently operates retail locations and/or conducts EnergyPod installations in the United States, Canada, Australia, Denmark, Switzerland, Germany and the United Kingdom.
